SERVITE DOMINUM IN TIMORE

A parishioner recently reminded me that this present bulletin series started over two years ago! So it is with a grateful heart that I offer you the final installment of Abbé Barthe's reflections on the ceremonies of the Mass in his, A Forest of Symbols. We have reached the final moments of the Mass. Once the celebrant has concluded the post-Communion prayer and the dismissal, he prays the Placeat. Looking at other early Christian liturgies, we can see an equivalent to the Placeat universally. It is a prayer that summarizes and concludes the sacred action. In it, the priest humbly calls upon the Holy Trinity to receive the sacrifice and bestow His pardon.

The priest then proceeds to the final blessing. The blessing has not been a universal aspect of western rites. Nonetheless, we can detect in it roots that stem from ancient Jewish sources. To grant a blessing was seen even in Old Testament times as a priestly power, one connected to the temple sacrifices (Lev 9:22-23). All the more, the great high priest, Christ, fulfills the role of the Jewish priesthood and perfects it. We also call to mind the very moment that our Savior ascended into heaven. At that time, he blessed His disciples before departing in bodily form (Lk 24:50). The blessing of Christ recalls for us that He leads us into the Father's blessings (Mt 25:34).

At this time of the Mass, many signs can be discerned illuminating the mystery of Christ's Ascension. In particular, the reading of the Last Gospel stirs thoughts of our Lord's mounting the clouds in glory. During the Last Gospel, it might feel like a long pause in the concluding rites of the Mass, which otherwise have a rapid flow. During this pause, we recall the remark made in Acts 1:11, "Ye men of Galilee, why stand you looking up to heaven." We cannot help but be struck with quiet wonder after encountering the Lord in the sacrament of the altar, thus our common silence after the last blessing places us shoulder-to-shoulder with the disciples on the very day of the Ascension. We reflect on our Lord's departure, and stir our hopes for the day of fulfilment when He returns as He departed.

While we think on the final earthly moments of our Lord, we hear the words of St. John that bring us all the way back to the beginning of this mystery. The Word was with the Father from the beginning, and the Word was God, and the Word become flesh. As a result, the Church shows us the big picture as the Mass comes to a close: the One Whom we have received has existed from all eternity, He dwelt among us, He sits now in glory, and will come for us once more. Thus overwhelmed by the graces to which we have access, the Last Gospel also is the perfect setting for a liturgical 'thanksgiving.' Making a thanksgiving after the Mass has been an immemorial practice of private piety. With the incorporation of the Last Gospel in the 13th century, now the liturgy itself unites the whole body of believers in a public act of gratitude for graces received.

In the Mass, we witness for ourselves in allegorical fashion, the unfolding of the life of Christ. In this sacred setting of the Roman Rite, we rejoice then to rise above allegory and witness the real, sacramental consummation of the events which accomplished the salvation of the world! Clearly, then, every time we attend the Mass, we come face to face with God. We cannot help but be transformed by this experience!

"Without Sunday we cannot live!" These were the words of the ancient Christians of Abitene in present-day Tunisia. There, in the early fourth century, Emperor Diocletian prohibited Christians from possessing the scriptures and gathering for the Eucharist. However, the Christians were found by the Romans in disobedience. The Proconsul Anulinus asked them why they refused the emperor's order. They replied simply, "Sine dominico non possumus." The very existence of faith in a Christian relies upon our Sunday observance! Having responded thus, the 49 Christians arrested at Abitene surrendered their lives in martyrdom, witnessing with their blood to Christ's victory over death! ~Fr. O'Brien
